

WORLD HISTORY

MODULE – 44

DECOLONIZATION AND NAM - 1

- 1 In 1945, after the end of World War II about 750 million people, nearly a third of the world's population, lived in territories that were dependent on colonial powers.
- 2 Decolonization is defined as the act of colonization, or freeing a country from being dependent on other country.
- 3 The term generally refers to the achievement of independence by the various colonies and protectorates of in Asia and Africa following World War II.

FACTORS AND FORCES THAT CONTRIBUTED TO DECOLONIZATION

- 1 Within two decades after the end of World War II most of the Asia, African and Latin American countries freed themselves from the yoke of their colonial masters.
- 2 By the end of the 20th century, with the expectation of small pockets in various parts of the world, all the countries in the world were free from the direct political control of the other countries.
- 3 The following were the reasons which accelerated the pace of freedom movements in various parts of the world after the World War II:

1 WEAKENED IMPERIALIST POWERS

- 1 World War II weakened the imperialist countries to a great extent.
- 2 The military and the economic powers of these colonial nations received a huge set back because of the war.
- 3 As a result these countries not only became weak but also lost their hegemony and control over the international affairs.

2 EXHAUSTED AFTER WW-II

- 1 The imperial powers lost their capacity to continue and sustain the protracted colonial war.
- 2 Many of the imperial powers were marred with heavy war destruction, acute war shortages and engaged with the reconstruction of their country.
- 3 At such juncture it was impossible for them to be in direct conflict with the nationalist movements.

3 ENTRY OF JAPAN

- 1 Entry of Japan in the World War II against Britain and France and its occupation of South East Asia contributed to decolonization to a great extent.
- 2 The Japanese aggression made these regions emerge as nationalistic, radical and revolutionary.

4 COMMUNISM AND SOCIALISM

- 1 The rise of communism in erstwhile USSR and her ascendancy as a superpower after the World War II gave a serious jolt to the ideologies of capitalism and colonialism.
- 2 Communism and Socialism not just inspired the national movements in various countries but also radicalized them.

5 DEMOCRACY

- 1 World War II was fought in the name of democracy and to defend freedom.
- 2 It galvanized the freedom movements in various countries.
- 3 In many countries where nationalism had begun to emerge during the inter-war period, powerful nationalist movements took shape after the war.

6 ROLE OF INTELLECTUALS AND THINKERS

- 1 In the changed political climate in the world after the World War II, imperialism began to get loathed upon by intellectuals and thinkers.
- 2 It no longer was considered as a status of "superiority" or "superior civilization".

7 INHUMAN TREATMENT

- Imperialism, after the war, got associated with brute force, exploitation, plunder, gross injustice and was considered inhuman and immoral.

8 ROLE OF INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

- 1 The anti-imperialist ideology and solidarity between the newly independent countries also gave a huge impetus to decolonization.
- 2 The international organizations like United Nations and Non-Aligned Movements vehemently opposed imperialism and stood for self-determination, national sovereignty and equality.

FACTORS AND FORCES THAT CONTRIBUTED TO DECOLONIZATION

9 ROLE OF TWO SUPER POWERS

- 1 The two superpowers were hostile towards the colonialism.
- 2 They exerted severe diplomatic pressure on colonial powers in the favour of decolonization.

- It was the cultural, economic and political process through which colonies broke free from the colonial empires and integrated themselves to the new 'world order'.

CULTURAL

- 1 Colonial empires were generally founded on principles of Racism and right to rule over inferior races. These narratives had to be challenged.
- 2 An image of benevolent and modernising influence was used as a pretext for colonial exploitation. However, this was later broken.
- 3 The self-confidence of people had to be boosted.
- 4 Exercises of cultural integration and the creation of national identities and a shared past were emphasised.
- 5 Most states were successful in this regard, though deep-rooted tribal differences and prejudices led to problems in Africa.

POLITICAL

- 1 Newly freed states had to be allowed to follow an independent foreign policy.
- 2 They had to raise resources and build stable institutions (Eg: An Army subject to strict civilian control).
- 3 Representative and democratic institutions needed to be built. This needed an enlightened citizenry and an empowered leadership.

ECONOMIC

- 1 The old European powers sought to exert influence in newly independent states through biased trade policies. This came to be known as Neo-Colonialism.
- 2 Most of the investment in these countries came from the erstwhile colonizers. So they were able to control new governments through lobbying and other informal (often corrupt) means.
- 3 Colonial powers were technologically advanced. So they used it as a leverage in directing foreign investment and hence controlling the new states.
- 4 They sought to guard their technological supremacy through tight Intellectual property regimes.
