

LIVE

Learning Space

NEWSPAPER 29th OCTOBER, 2018

ITEM WISE EDITORIALS

44th WEEK

JAPAN COMING CLOSER TO CHINA ??

UPSC CSE – GS II

GS II ... International Relations

Learning Space

LIVE

NEWSPAPER EDITORIALS

... DISCUSSION

29th OCTOBER, 2018

2

Japan and China driven closer by trade tensions with US

Trade tensions with Washington have driven Japan and China into an unlikely friendship. Tokyo and Beijing have long been at odds over past military confrontations and present territorial disputes. Yet on a crucial visit to Beijing, Japan's Prime Minister Shinzo Abe has now hailed a historic turning point. The two sides are seeking to boost economic ties and regional stability including North Korea. On Friday Mr Abe met his Chinese counterpart Li Keqiang, and he is due to meet President Xi Jinping later.

How do China and Japan get along?

Usually, not that great. The countries do trade with each other but politically, things have been quite fragile at times. Japan's World War Two occupation of parts of China remains a very emotional issue and there are several disputed islands that Tokyo and Beijing have yet to agree on. Mr Abe's current trip to China is the first visit by a Japanese head of government in seven years. "From competition to co-existence, Japan and China bilateral relations have entered a new phase," the Japanese premier told reporters in Beijing. His Chinese counterpart echoed that sentiment saying they should "return to a normal track" of "stable, sustained and healthy" relations.

Why are the talks important?

It comes at a time of escalating trade tensions between the US and most of the rest of the world. That means Washington is making it harder for other countries to export to the US market. The Trump administration has imposed huge trade tariffs which it says are in retaliation for other countries' unfair trade practices. While Washington's trade war is most prominently fought with China, it also targets many other countries, including Japan.

US-China trade war in 300 words How China is fighting back in the trade war

Biggest economies

Travelling with Mr Abe is a Japanese business delegation hoping to forge closer ties and boost trade. "Vigorous trade will bring the bonds between our people ever closer," Mr Abe told reporters. Japan and China are by far Asia's largest economies and the two sides have signed a deal to maintain annual dialogue and to cooperate on innovation. They also agreed to make it easier for their financial markets to work together and vowed to uphold free trade principles. There are also plans for a wider regional economic partnership and a special trade zone linking up China, Japan and South Korea.

What about North Korea?

It's not all about trade though. Both sides also say they want to work to safeguard peace and stability in the region. The biggest threat to peace is widely seen as coming from North Korea, and Tokyo and Beijing have long disagreed on how to deal with the situation. North Korea's missile and nuclear programme North Korea's sidelined human rights crisis China is Pyongyang's only remaining economic ally, while Japan has in the past warned against any rush to appease Pyongyang. North Korean missiles have Japan in easy reach and a number of abducted Japanese citizens remain captives in the North. At the Beijing summit though, Mr Abe said Tokyo was "determined" to normalise diplomatic relations with Pyongyang if there was progress on denuclearisation and the release of Japanese citizens.

26th October, 2018

2 Japan and China driven closer by trade tensions with US

Trade tensions with Washington have driven Japan and China into an unlikely friendship. Tokyo and Beijing have long been at odds over past military confrontations and present territorial disputes. Yet on a crucial visit to Beijing, Japan's Prime Minister Shinzo Abe has now hailed a historic turning point. The two sides are seeking to boost economic ties and regional stability including North Korea. On Friday Mr Abe met his Chinese counterpart Li Keqiang, and he is due to meet President Xi Jinping later.

How do China and Japan get along?

Usually, not that great. The countries do trade with each other but politically, things have been quite fragile at times. Japan's World War Two occupation of parts of China remains a very emotional issue and there are several disputed islands that Tokyo and Beijing have yet to agree on. Mr Abe's current trip to China is the first visit by a Japanese head of government in seven years. "From competition to co-existence, Japan and China bilateral relations have entered a new phase," the Japanese premier told reporters in Beijing. His Chinese counterpart echoed that sentiment saying they should "return to a normal track" of "stable, sustained and healthy" relations.

Why are the talks important?

It comes at a time of escalating trade tensions between the US and most of the rest of the world. That means Washington is making it harder for other countries to export to the US market. The Trump administration has imposed huge trade tariffs which it says are in retaliation for other countries' unfair trade practices. While Washington's trade war is most prominently fought with China, it also targets many other countries, including Japan.

Biggest economies

Travelling with Mr Abe is a Japanese business delegation hoping to forge closer ties and boost trade. "Vigorous trade will bring the bonds between our people ever closer," Mr Abe told reporters.

...Contd.

2 Japan and China driven closer by trade tensions with US

Japan and China are by far Asia's largest economies and the two sides have signed a deal to maintain annual dialogue and to cooperate on innovation. They also agreed to make it easier for their financial markets to work together and vowed to uphold free trade principles. There are also plans for a wider regional economic partnership and a special trade zone linking up China, Japan and South Korea.

What about North Korea?

It's not all about trade though. Both sides also say they want to work to safeguard peace and stability in the region. The biggest threat to peace is widely seen as coming from North Korea, and Tokyo and Beijing have long disagreed on how to deal with the situation.

China is Pyongyang's only remaining economic ally, while Japan has in the past warned against any rush to appease Pyongyang. North Korean missiles have Japan in easy reach and a number of abducted Japanese citizens remain captives in the North. At the Beijing summit though, Mr Abe said Tokyo was "determined" to normalise diplomatic relations with Pyongyang if there was progress on denuclearisation and the release of Japanese citizens.

2

Japan and China driven closer by trade tensions with US

Trade tensions with Washington have driven Japan and China into an unlikely friendship. Tokyo and Beijing have long been at odds over past military confrontations and present territorial disputes. Yet on a crucial visit to Beijing, Japan's Prime Minister Shinzo Abe has now hailed a historic turning point. The two sides are seeking to boost economic ties and regional stability including North Korea. On Friday Mr Abe met his Chinese counterpart Li Keqiang, and he is due to meet President Xi Jinping later.

How do China and Japan get along?

Usually, not that great. The countries do trade with each other but politically, things have been quite fragile at times. Japan's World War Two occupation of parts of China remains a very emotional issue and there are several disputed islands that Tokyo and Beijing have yet to agree on. Mr Abe's current trip to China is the first visit by a Japanese head of government in seven years. "From competition to co-existence, Japan and China bilateral relations have entered a new phase," the Japanese premier told reporters in Beijing. His Chinese counterpart echoed that sentiment saying they should "return to a normal track" of "stable, sustained and healthy" relations.

Why are the talks important?

It comes at a time of escalating trade tensions between the US and most of the rest of the world. That means Washington is making it harder for other countries to export to the US market. The Trump administration has imposed huge trade tariffs which it says are in retaliation for other countries' unfair trade practices. While Washington's trade war is most prominently fought with China, it also targets many other countries, including Japan.

US-China trade war in 300 words How China is fighting back in the trade war

Biggest economies

Traveling with Mr Abe is a Japanese business delegation hoping to forge closer ties and boost trade. "Vigorous trade will bring the bonds between our people ever closer," Mr Abe told reporters. Japan and China are by far Asia's largest economies and the two sides have signed a deal to maintain annual dialogue and to cooperate on innovation. The also agreed to make it easier for their financial markets to work together and vowed to uphold free trade principles. There are also plans for a wider regional economic partnership and a special trade zone linking up China, Japan and South Korea.

What about North Korea?

It's not all about trade though. Both sides also say they want to work to safeguard peace and stability in the region. The biggest threat to peace is widely seen as coming from North Korea, and Tokyo and Beijing have long disagreed on how to deal with the situation. North Korea's missile and nuclear programme North Korea's sidelined human rights crisis China is Pyongyang's only remaining economic ally, while Japan has in the past warned against any rush to appease Pyongyang. North Korean missiles have Japan in easy reach and a number of abducted Japanese citizens remain captives in the north. At the Beijing summit though, Mr Abe said Tokyo was "determined" to normalise diplomatic relations with Pyongyang if there was progress on denuclearisation and the release of Japanese citizens.

BBC NEWS

26th October, 2018

UPSC CSE – GS II

GS II ... International Relations

Effect of policies and politics of developed and developing countries on India's interests, Indian diaspora.

IMPORTANT QUESTION

ESSAY/ MAINS / GD / INTERVIEWS

Critically analyze the development of China & Japan coming together and its effect on Indo-Pacific Region in general and India-Japan in particular.

CHINA-JAPAN ... A HIGHER DEGREE OF SUSPICION!

- Japan's World War-II occupation of parts of China remains a very emotional issue.
- There are several islands disputed, like Senkaku (which China calls Diaoyu) in East China Sea, because they are close to key shipping lines, offer rich fishing grounds and lie near potential oil and gas reserves.
- Moreover, China regularly sends Coastguard vessels near the islands.

CHINA

South Korea

JAPAN

East China Sea

SENKAKU ISLANDS

VIETNAM

Lao PDR

THAILAND

IS THE US RESPONSIBLE FOR NEW PHASE OF RELATIONS BETWEEN CHINA-JAPAN?

China and Japan are Asia's largest economies. Now, the two sides have signed a deal to maintain annual dialogue and to cooperate on innovation.

- 1 Now, it is the time of escalating trade tensions between the U.S. and most of the rest of the world.
- 2 U.S. is making harder for other countries to export to U.S. market.
- 3 USA trade war is most prominently fought with China and at the same time, it also targets other countries, including Japan.
- 4 USA is pulling out of several International Organisations.

CHINA-JAPAN ... TO A NEW STAGE OF COOPERATION

- 1 China-Japan decided to work together to develop new overseas markets by focussing on collaboration, instead of competing with each other.
- 2 Joint forays in third countries would be one of the new templates of Tokyo-Beijing ties.
- 3 Over 1,000 business representatives from the two nations gathered and signed multiple cooperation documents.
- 4 Asia's two biggest economies will aim to form a new model of economic cooperation.

CHINA-JAPAN ... TO A NEW STAGE OF COOPERATION

5 Number of agreements were signed which covered energy cooperation, military confidence building measures in the East China Sea, infrastructure development and joint development of high-end technology.

6 An agreement was signed to establish a discussion platform on high-end technology and intellectual property.

7 The two sides signed an agreement on joint development of gas fields in East China Sea.

8 They also agreed to make it easier for their financial markets to work together.

9 They also vowed to uphold the free trade principles.

10 There are also plans for wider regional economic partnership and a Special Trade Zone linking up China, Japan and South Korea.

WHAT ABOUT INDIA-JAPAN RELATIONS?

- 1 What will happen to Asia-Africa Growth Corridor?
- 2 What about Quadrilateral?
- 3 What about Malabar Exercises?
- 4 How Japan views India- China Relations in future?
- 5 What about containment of China?

WE EXPRESS OUR SINCERE THANKS
FOR VIEWING THIS VIDEO

Presented by

Learning Space

For Suggestions:

suggestions@learningspace.in

To Contact us:

info@learningspace.in

OUR TEAM

G. V. Rao

K. Srikanth

D. Sunil Kumar

L. V. Krishna

Y. Deepthi

Amrita Naidu

M. Binukrishna

G. Ravi Babu

D. Joji

K. Victor Babu

Visit us at:

www.learningspacedigital.com

0 8 6 6 -2 4 4 4 4 7 2

0 9 8 4 9 9 4 2 2 9 9