

LIVE

NEWSPAPER

5th NOV, 2018

ITEM WISE EDITORIALS

45th WEEK

IRAN SANCTIONS ... EFFECT ON INDIA-IRAN RELATIONS

UPSC CSE – GS II

GS II ... International Relations

Learning Space

LIVE

NEWSPAPER EDITORIALS

... DISCUSSION

5th NOVEMBER, 2018

4 Iran oil: India to get U.S. sanctions waiver

8 nations can import but at lower levels after November 5

SRIRAM LAKSHMAN
WASHINGTON

Eight countries will be given exemptions and "weeks longer to wind down" their trade with Iran, once U.S. sanctions against Iran kick in on November 5.

This was clarified by Secretary of State Michael Pompeo on Friday during a conference call with some members of the press.

EU not on list

Mr. Pompeo said the list of eight "jurisdictions" would be released on Monday, two of which have already reached zero levels of Iranian oil imports.

He also clarified that the European Union (EU) — which consists of 28 countries including the U.K. — will not be one of the jurisdictions granted a temporary exemption.

India — for whom Iran is the third largest source of oil after Iraq and Saudi Arabia — is expected to be on the list as The Hindu recently reported.

SWIFT services

In terms of entities granted exemptions, there would be no exemption for Society for Worldwide Interbank Financial Telecommunication (SWIFT), a global financial messaging service, Treasury

Free to trade

India is among eight countries that will receive a waiver from U.S. sanctions on oil trade with Iran.

On May 8, President Donald Trump announces that the U.S. is pulling out of the Iran nuclear deal.

Sanctions imposed prior to nuclear deal are re-triggered. These target Iran's ability to purchase U.S. dollar notes & trade in metals, besides other currency transactions.

From November 4, other sanctions will kick in targeting Iran's oil exports and energy sector.

On November 2, Secretary of State Mike Pompeo announced that eight countries including India, which is the second largest importer of crude oil from Iran, will receive sanction waivers to keep buying oil.

Secretary Steven Mnuchin, who was also on the call, said. SWIFT — which does not hold money itself but transmits information on transactions — has a network that spans 200 countries and some 11,000 financial institutions, as per the data released by the company. If it is sanctioned, that will have a significant impact on organisations that use it. SWIFT has been told it will have to cut off from sanctioned entities as soon as technologically feasible or could face sanctions, Mr. Mnuchin said.

The EU, which remains party to the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (JCPOA or the 'Iran Deal') has been frustrated by the U.S.'s withdrawal, and has been searching for ways to work around the sanctions, including through the use of a Special Purpose Vehicle (SPV). The U.S. plans to bring any SPV within its sanctions net as well. "...if there are transactions that go through there that have the intent of evading our sanctions, we will aggressively pursue our remedies," Mr. Mnuchin said.

700 entities to be hit

Seven hundred entities — individuals and groups as well as companies — will be sanctioned on Monday, Mr. Mnuchin said. Most of them will be formerly sanctioned entities, but some 300 will be new.

How not to choose among allies

A sanctions waiver from the U.S. may prove to be a rather hollow victory for India

SHASHINI HADAR

In May 2012, Hillary Clinton, then U.S. Secretary of State, visited Delhi on behalf of the Western countries negotiating the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (JCPOA), or the nuclear deal, with Iran, to continue India to cut its oil imports from Iran. In her book Hard Choices, she later recounted her tough battle with the Indian government, as she ran through the reasons India needed to help put pressure on Iran to return to the negotiating table for the six-party talks. Eventually, India agreed to cut its imports by only about 15%, but cumulative global pressure had the desired impact on Iran, where inflation had risen more than 40% and oil exports declined from 2.5 million barrels of crude each day to about 1 million. JCPOA negotiations that followed eventually led to a deal hailed by the United Nations, that had quarterbacked the talks all through.

Unlike in 2002, the U.S.'s EU allies are now working closely with arch rivals like Russia and China to put a "special payments mechanism", primarily with a view to supporting trade in Tehran to ensure that the Iranian regime does not walk out of the nuclear deal as well.

While the U.S. may succeed in squeezing Iran economically, it is increasingly isolated politically, as was evident at the most recent Financial Action Task Force meet in Paris where the U.S. proposed sanctions on Iran for terror funding. Even so, the U.S. has continued on its unilateral path, with out a care for the very "rules-based international order" that it so often invokes.

For India, the impact of the American sanctions plan would be

RITVI MANOJ/REUTERS

from any other country involved in the deal, and the UN has expressed grave misgivings about the decision. The U.S. has given no evidence that Iran is in India's third largest supplier. There are not only rising costs of oil to contend with, but also the added cost of having to recalibrate Indian fuel refineries that are used to process Iran's special crude. The second impact would be on India's investment in the Chabahar port, which would face both direct and indirect sanctions: as shippers, port suppliers and trading companies refuse to participate in the project. When India had opened the tenders for cranes for heavy lifting at Chabahar a few years ago, for example, it found no takers, and eventually was forced to award the contract to ZPMC in 2017. This problem will only get more acute as sanctions kick in, threatening India's $500 million investment in the port and its $2 billion plan for a railway line to circumvent Pakistan and reach Afghanistan and Central Asian trade lines. Finally, there would be the impact on India's regional security situation, which could see the Iranian-Arab divide deepen. Afghanistan's choices dwindle and an angry Iran pitched closer into the China-Russia corner.

Most worrying for India is that all of the above outcomes will follow regardless of whether the U.S. gives India a waiver for sanctions or not. While the 'waiver' list, which U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo has hinted will be issued on Monday, would state off penalties and allow India to continue some of its trade with Iran, it will not restore the pre-2008 situation. The U.S. has said that it is only issuing temporary waivers, and the waivers are strictly linked to the condition that countries receiving them keep cutting down their purchases from Iran. Along with the JCPOA-linked sanctions, India continues to face sanctions linked to the Countering America's Adversaries Through Sanctions Act, which puts more stricture on dealings with Iran, Russia and North Korea. The waiver is therefore no magic wand to be wished for, as it only probes the problems for India down the road.

Iran's options

Meanwhile, little thought has been given to Iran's reaction if India keeps submitting to the U.S.'s sanctions regime against it. With trade levels receding, the Iranian regime may well lose interest in the Chabahar option, and focus on its main port of Bandar Abbas instead, derailing India's grander plans for regional connectivity. There is also the worry that all of India's sacrifices may come to naught, as Mr. Trump may well use the pressure placed on Iran to his own advantage, and possibly open talks with Tehran at a later date. Just months after the U.S. demanded that India close its mission in Pyongyang, Mr. Trump was planning a summit in Singapore

with North Korean leader Kim Jong-un.

Given the heavy costs and in the complete absence of any benefits, it is surprising that the Modi government has not been more vocal in its protest against the U.S.'s actions. In May this year, when asked, External Affairs Minister Sushma Swaraj had said very emphatically that India adheres only to "UN sanctions, not unilateral ones". Yet, all the government's moves have been to the contrary, as American delegations have been allowed to come to Delhi and issue dire warnings, of the kind Nikki Haley, the U.S.'s envoy to the UN, did. Meanwhile, Indian officials have made a beeline for Washington to discuss the reasons why India deserves a waiver, from both Iran and CAATSA sanctions. According to these officials, the U.S. has been apprised of India's energy requirement compulsions, and of the cut of about 35-50% in its oil purchases from Iran. On the CAATSA front, the U.S. has also been assured of a significant reduction in Indian defence dependence on Russia, and that no weapons procured, like the recently purchased S-400 missile system, would be used against American interests.

As a result, if the U.S. presses on with sanctions, it would be a marked failure of Indian diplomacy. And if the waiver does come through, as is indicated, it will be no victory, but signify an abject submission to the sanctions themselves. With no gains in the offing from a policy of 'pragmatism', India may have been better off sticking to principle instead.

shashini.hadar@thehindu.co.in

4 Iran oil: India to get U.S. sanctions waiver

8 nations can import but at lower levels after November 5

Eight countries will be given exemptions and “weeks longer to wind down” their trade with Iran, once U.S. sanctions against Iran kick in on November 5.

This was clarified by Secretary of State Michael Pompeo on Friday during a conference call with some members of the press.

EU not on list

Mr. Pompeo said the list of eight “jurisdictions” would be released on Monday, two of which have already reached zero levels of Iranian oil imports.

He also clarified that the European Union (EU) — which consists of 28 countries including the U.K. — will not be one of the jurisdictions granted a temporary exemption.

India — for whom Iran is the third largest source of oil after Iraq and Saudi Arabia — is expecting to be on the list as The Hindu recently reported.

SWIFT services

In terms of entities granted exemptions, there would be no exemption for Society for Worldwide Interbank Financial Telecommunication (SWIFT), a global financial messaging service, Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin, who was also on the call, said. SWIFT — which does not hold money itself but transmits information on transactions — has a network that spans 200 countries and some 11,000 financial institutions, as per the data released by the company. If it is sanctioned, that will have a significant impact on organisations that use it. SWIFT has been told it will have to cut off from sanctioned entities as soon as technologically feasible or could face sanctions, Mr. Mnuchin said.

4 Iran oil: India to get U.S. sanctions waiver

The EU, which remains party to the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (JCPOA or the 'Iran Deal') has been frustrated by the U.S.'s withdrawal, and has been searching for ways to work around the sanctions, including through the use of a Special Purpose Vehicle (SPV). The U.S. plans to bring any SPV within its sanctions net as well. "...If there are transactions that go through there that have the intent of evading our sanctions, we will aggressively pursue our remedies," Mr. Mnuchin said.

700 entities to be hit

Seven hundred entities — individuals and groups as well as companies — will be sanctioned on Monday, Mr. Mnuchin said. Most of them will be formerly sanctioned entities, but some 300 will be new.

4 How not to choose among allies

A sanctions waiver from the U.S. may prove to be a rather hollow victory for India.

In May 2012, Hillary Clinton, then U.S. Secretary of State, visited Delhi on behalf of the Western countries negotiating the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (JCPOA), or the nuclear deal, with Iran, to convince India to cut its oil imports from Iran. In her book Hard Choices, she later recounted her tough battle with the Indian government, as she ran through the reasons India needed to help put pressure on Iran to return to the negotiating table for the six-party talks. Eventually, India agreed to cut its imports by only about 15%. But cumulative global pressure had the desired impact on Iran, where inflation had risen more than 40% and oil exports declined from 2.5 million barrels of crude each day to about 1 million. JCPOA negotiations that followed eventually led to a deal hailed by the United Nations, that had quarterbacked the talks all through.

Changed times

As U.S. officials have led a series of delegations to New Delhi in the last few months, they have had a similar mission, but with a completely different backdrop. For starters, the sanctions that the U.S. now proposes trying to ensure India adheres to have been placed not in order to forge any deal, but because the Trump administration has walked out of the JCPOA. In this the U.S. has no support from any other country involved in the deal, and the UN has expressed grave misgivings about the decision. The U.S. has given no evidence that Iran in any way violated the terms of the JCPOA — in fact, the International Atomic Energy Agency's June report concluded that Iran's stockpile of uranium and heavy water as well as its implementation of additional protocols were "in compliance" with the agreement.

4 How not to choose among allies

Unlike in 2012, the U.S.'s EU allies are now working closely with arch rivals like Russia and China to put a “special payments mechanism”, primarily with a view to supporting trade to Tehran to ensure that the Iranian regime does not walk out of the nuclear deal as well.

While the U.S. may succeed in squeezing Iran economically, it is increasingly isolated politically, as was evident at the most recent Financial Action Task Force meet in Paris where the U.S. proposed sanctions on Iran for terror funding. Even so, the U.S. has continued on its unilateral path, without a care for the very “rules-based international order” that it so often invokes.

For India, the impact of the American sanctions plan would be manifold, regardless of the waiver. To begin with, there is the shock that sanctions would deal to the oil import bill, given that Iran is India's third largest supplier. There are not only rising costs of oil to contend with, but also the added cost of having to recalibrate Indian fuel refineries that are used to process Iran's special crude. The second impact would be on India's investment in the Chabahar port, which would face both direct and indirect sanctions: as shippers, port suppliers and trading companies refuse to participate in the project. When India had opened the tenders for cranes for heavy lifting at Chabahar a few years ago, for example, it found no takers, and eventually was forced to award the contract to ZPMC in 2017. This problem will only get more acute as sanctions kick in, threatening India's $500 million investment in the port and its $2 billion plan for a railway line to circumvent Pakistan and reach Afghanistan and Central Asian trade lines. Finally, there would be the impact on India's regional security situation, which could see the Iranian-Arab divide deepen, Afghanistan's choices dwindle and an angry Iran pitched closer into the China-Russia corner.

4 How not to choose among allies

Most worrying for India is that all of the above outcomes will follow regardless of whether the U.S. gives India a waiver for sanctions or not. While the 'waiver' list, which U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo has hinted will be issued on Monday, would stave off penalties and allow India to continue some of its trade with Iran, it will not restore the pre-2018 situation. The U.S. has said that it is only issuing temporary waivers, and the waivers are strictly linked to the condition that countries receiving them keep cutting down their purchases from Iran. Along with the JCPOA-linked sanctions, India continues to face sanctions linked to the Countering America's Adversaries Through Sanctions Act, which puts more strictures on dealings with Iran, Russia and North Korea. The waiver is therefore no magic wand to be wished for, as it only pushes the problems for India down the road.

Iran's options

Meanwhile, little thought has been given to Iran's reaction if India keeps submitting to the U.S.'s sanctions regime against it. With trade levels receding, the Iranian regime may well lose interest in the Chabahar option, and focus on its main port of Bandar Abbas instead, derailing India's grander plans for regional connectivity. There is also the worry that all of India's sacrifices may come to naught, as Mr. Trump may well use the pressure placed on Iran to his own advantage, and possibly open talks with Tehran at a later date. Just months after the U.S. demanded that India close its mission in Pyongyang, Mr. Trump was planning a summit in Singapore with North Korean leader Kim Jong-un.

4 How not to choose among allies

Given the heavy costs and in the complete absence of any benefits, it is surprising that the Modi government has not been more vocal in its protest against the U.S.'s actions. In May this year, when asked, External Affairs Minister Sushma Swaraj had said very emphatically that India adheres only to "UN sanctions, not unilateral ones". Yet, all the government's moves have been to the contrary, as American delegations have been allowed to come to Delhi and issue dire warnings, of the kind Nikki Haley, the U.S.'s envoy to the UN, did. Meanwhile, Indian officials have made a beeline for Washington to discuss the reasons why India deserves a waiver, from both Iran and CAATSA sanctions. According to these officials, the U.S. has been apprised of India's energy requirement compulsions, and of the cut of about 35-50% in its oil purchases from Iran. On the CAATSA front, the U.S. has also been assured of a significant reduction in Indian defence dependence on Russia, and that no weapons procured, like the recently purchased S-400 missile system, would be used against American interests.

As a result, if the U.S. presses on with sanctions, it would be a marked failure of Indian diplomacy. And if the waiver does come through, as is indicated, it will be no victory, but signify an abject submission to the sanctions themselves. With no gains in the offing from a policy of 'pragmatism', India may have been better off sticking to principle instead.

4

How not to choose among allies

A sanctions waiver from the U.S. may prove to be a rather hollow victory for India

SEHARSHI HAIDAR

In May 2012, Hillary Clinton, then U.S. Secretary of State, visited Delhi on behalf of the Western countries negotiating the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (JCPOA), or the nuclear deal, with Iran, to convince India to cut its oil imports from Iran. In her book Hard Choices, she later recounted her tough battle with the Indian government, as she ran through the reasons India needed to help put pressure on Iran to return to the negotiating table for the six-party talks. Eventually, India agreed to cut its imports by only about 15%. But cumulative global pressure had the desired impact on Iran, where inflation had risen more than 40% and oil exports declined from 2.5 million barrels of crude each day to about 1 million. JCPOA negotiations that followed eventually led to a deal hailed by the United Nations, that had quarterbacked the talks all through.

Changed times

As U.S. officials have led a series of delegations to New Delhi in the last few months, they have had a similar mission, but with a completely different backdrop. For starters, the sanctions that the U.S. now proposes trying to ensure India adheres to have been placed not in order to forge any deal, but because the Trump administration has walked out of the JCPOA. In this the U.S. has no support from any other country involved in the deal, and the UN has expressed grave misgivings about the decision. The U.S. has given no evidence that Iran in any way violated the terms of the JCPOA – in fact, the International Atomic Energy Agency's June report concluded that Iran's stockpile of uranium and heavy water as well as its implementation of additional protocols were "in compliance" with the agreement.

SARITHA SUNDARARAJAN

Unlike in 2012, the U.S.'s EU allies are now working closely with arch rivals like Russia and China to put a "special payments mechanism", primarily with a view to supporting trade to Tehran to ensure that the Iranian regime does not walk out of the nuclear deal as well.

While the U.S. may succeed in squeezing Iran economically, it is increasingly isolated politically, as was evident at the most recent Financial Action Task Force meet in Paris where the U.S. proposed sanctions on Iran for terror funding. Even so, the U.S. has continued on its unilateral path, without a care for the very "rules-based international order" that it so often invokes.

For India, the impact of the American sanctions plan would be manifold, regardless of the waiver. To begin with, there is the shock that sanctions would deal to the oil import bill, given that Iran is India's third largest supplier. There are not only rising costs of oil to contend with, but also the added cost of having to recalibrate Indian fuel refineries that are used to process Iran's special crude. The second impact would be on India's investment in the Chabahar port, which would face both direct and indirect sanctions: as shippers, port suppliers and trading companies refuse to participate in the project. When India had opened the tenders for cranes for heavy lifting at Chabahar a few years ago, for example, it found no takers, and eventually was forced to award the contract to ZPMC in 2017. This problem will only get more acute as sanctions kick in, threatening India's $500 million investment in the port and its $2 billion plan for a railway line to circumvent Pakistan and reach Afghanistan and Central Asian trade lines. Finally, there would be the impact on India's regional security situation, which could see the Iranian-Arab divide deepen, Afghanistan's choices dwindle and an angry Iran pitched closer into the China-Russia corner.

Most worrying for India is that all of the above outcomes will follow regardless of whether the U.S. gives India a waiver for sanctions or not. While the "waiver" list, which U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo has hinted will be issued on Monday, would stave off penalties and allow India to continue some of its trade with Iran, it will not restore the pre-2018 situation. The U.S. has said that it is only issuing temporary waivers, and the waivers are strictly linked to the condition that countries receiving them keep cutting down their purchases from Iran. Along with the JCPOA-linked sanctions, India continues to face sanctions linked to the Countering America's Adversaries Through Sanctions Act, which puts more strictures on dealings with Iran, Russia and North Korea. The waiver is therefore no magic wand to be wished for, as it only pushes the problems for India down the road.

Iran's options

Meanwhile, little thought has been given to Iran's reaction if India keeps submitting to the U.S.'s sanctions regime against it. With trade levels receding, the Iranian regime may well lose interest in the Chabahar option, and focus on its main port of Bandar Abbas instead, derailing India's grander plans for regional connectivity. There is also the worry that all of India's sacrifices may come to naught, as Mr. Trump may well use the pressure placed on Iran to his own advantage, and possibly open talks with Tehran at a later date. Just months after the U.S. demanded that India close its mission in Pyongyang, Mr. Trump was planning a summit in Singapore

with North Korean leader Kim Jong-un.

Given the heavy costs and in the complete absence of any benefits, it is surprising that the Modi government has not been more vocal in its protest against the U.S.'s actions. In May this year, when asked, External Affairs Minister Sushma Swaraj had said very emphatically that India adheres only to "UN sanctions, not unilateral ones". Yet, all the government's moves have been to the contrary, as American delegations have been allowed to come to Delhi and issue dire warnings, of the kind Nikki Haley, the U.S.'s envoy to the UN, did. Meanwhile, Indian officials have made a beeline for Washington to discuss the reasons why India deserves a waiver, from both Iran and CAATSA sanctions. According to these officials, the U.S. has been apprised of India's energy requirement compulsions, and of the cut of about 35-50% in its oil purchases from Iran. On the CAATSA front, the U.S. has also been assured of a significant reduction in Indian defence dependence on Russia, and that no weapons procured, like the recently purchased S-400 missile system, would be used against American interests.

As a result, if the U.S. presses on with sanctions, it would be a marked failure of Indian diplomacy. And if the waiver does come through, as is indicated, it will be no victory, but signify an abject submission to the sanctions themselves. With no gains in the offing from a policy of 'pragmatism', India may have been better off sticking to principle instead.

seharshi.haidar@thehindu.co.in

UPSC CSE – GS II

GS II ... International Relations

Effect of policies and politics of developed and developing countries on India's interests, Indian diaspora.

IMPORTANT QUESTION

ESSAY/ MAINS / GD / INTERVIEWS

Examine the repercussions of USA coming out of Iran Nuclear Deal. "CAATSA and the sanctions on Iran shows USA's Supremacy in the Global Order". Discuss.

THE HINDU
INDIA'S NATIONAL NEWSPAPER SINCE 1878

3rd November, 2018

This is one more aspect, when one looks at USA not bothering about Rule-based International Order.

NEWS REPORT

- 1 India is among the 8 countries that will receive a waiver from US sanctions on oil trade with Iran.
- 2 Iran is the third largest source of oil for India after Iraq and Saudi Arabia.
- 3 President Donald Trump on May 8th announced that US is pulling out of the Iran Nuclear Deal.
- 4 EU will not be one of the jurisdictions to get temporary exemption.

Iran's oil output

Production in millions of barrels per day

Iran's exports

Top 5 trading partners 2017

■ Value (Euros bn)*

Iran's oil and gas export

Exports in billion US Dollars

Economic growth in Iran

GDP growth rate %

International sanctions imposed

Nuclear deal implemented; sanctions lifted

NO EXEMPTIONS FOR SWIFT!

700 entities, individuals and groups as well as companies will be sanctioned. Most of them will be formerly sanctioned entities but some 300 will be new.

- 1 SWIFT is Society for Worldwide Interbank Financial Telecommunication
- 2 It is a global financial messaging service.
- 3 It has a network of 200 Countries and 11,000 financial institutions.
- 4 SWIFT has been told that it will have to cut-off from sanctioned entities as soon as technologically feasible or could face sanctions.

USA MAY SUCCEED ECONOMICALLY, BUT ISOLATED POLITICALLY!

- 1 U.S.' allies are now working closely with arch rivals like Russia and China to put "Special Payments Mechanism".
- 2 This is with a view to support trade to Tehran to ensure that the Iranian regime does not walk out of the nuclear deal as well.
- 3 U.S. may succeed in squeezing Iran economically, but it is politically isolated.

HOW USA COMING OUT OF NUCLEAR DEAL MAY AFFECT INDIA?

1 India has to face the rising import bill.

2 There are added costs as the Indian Oil Refineries have to be recalibrated that are used to process Iran's special crude.

3 India's investment in the Chabahar Port, which may face both direct and indirect sanctions. Shippers, port suppliers and trading companies may refuse to participate in the Project.

4 It may affect INSTC, Ashgabat Agreement.

5 It not only threatens India's $ 500 million investment in the Port but also $ 2 billion plan for a railway line to reach Afghanistan and Central Asia.

6 Iran may pitch closer to China, Russia. Afghanistan's choices may dwindle.

7 It may further see the Iranian-Arab divide widening.

In addition to the JCPOA linked sanctions, there are also sanctions linked to CAATSA, which puts more strictures on dealings with Iran, Russia and North Korea.

IRAN-INDIA RELATIONS FROM IRANIAN PERSPECTIVE

- 1 Iran may loose interest in Chabahar Port and may handover to China.
- 2 It may also focus on "Bandar Abbas" instead.
- 3 India's grand plan for reasonal connectivity will be lost.
- 4 Moreover, unpredictable Trump may open dialogue once again with Iran, once India's role is lost in Iran.

ASPECT OF IRAN, RUSSIA ... HAS INDIA CAVED IN TO USA?

- 1 Few months ago, India said that it adheres only to UN Sanctions, not unilateral ones.
- 2 Later on, American delegations came to India and issued dire warnings.

- 3 Mean while, Indian officials made visits to Washington to discuss reasons why India deserves a waiver.
- 4 USA was appraised of India's energy requirement compulsions.
- 5 In fact, Indian officials informed US about significant reduction in Indian defence dependence on Russia. The weapons purchased would not be used against American interests.

Integration of Global Financial System and the supremacy of the Dollar keeping the USA flag high!

WE EXPRESS OUR SINCERE THANKS
FOR VIEWING THIS VIDEO

Presented by

Learning Space

For Suggestions:

suggestions@learningspace.in

To Contact us:

info@learningspace.in

OUR TEAM

G. V. Rao

K. Srikanth

D. Sunil Kumar

L. V. Krishna

Y. Deepthi

Amrita Naidu

M. Binukrishna

G. Ravi Babu

D. Joji

K. Victor Babu

Visit us at:

www.learningspacedigital.com

0 8 6 6 -2 4 4 4 4 7 2

0 9 8 4 9 9 4 2 2 9 9