

MUST FOR EVERY STUDENT ... FOR ALL COMPETITIVE EXAMS

ENGLISH MADE SIMPLE!

LEARN WITH GVR SIR

MODULE -26

Diatribes : An angry speech or piece of writing that severely criticizes something or someone.

250

ONAGE

EBIXCASH STUDIO

ASK 'WHY POLITICISE?'

Example :

Political diatribes, with polarized behaviour, is the common feature in Indian prime time television debates.

#ConversionTape

TWITTER COUNT

1570

Rhetoric : Speech or writing intended to be effective and influence people.

251

Example :
Majority of the university students were swayed by her rhetoric and hence she was elected Treasurer.

Rhetoric : Speech or writing that is intended to influence people, but that is not completely honest or sincere.

251

Example :
The rhetoric of political slogans may not translate into reality.

Brazen : Open and without shame, usually about something that shocks people.

252

Example :

Rich and powerful as well as political class, sometimes show a brazen disregard for the law.

Brazen : Open and without shame, usually about something that shocks people.

252

Example :

The brazen attitude of the adolescent son is clearly evident, when he smokes in front of his father.

Perilous : Extremely dangerous

253

Example :
The roads in the hilly terrain are quite perilous.

Perilous : Extremely dangerous

253

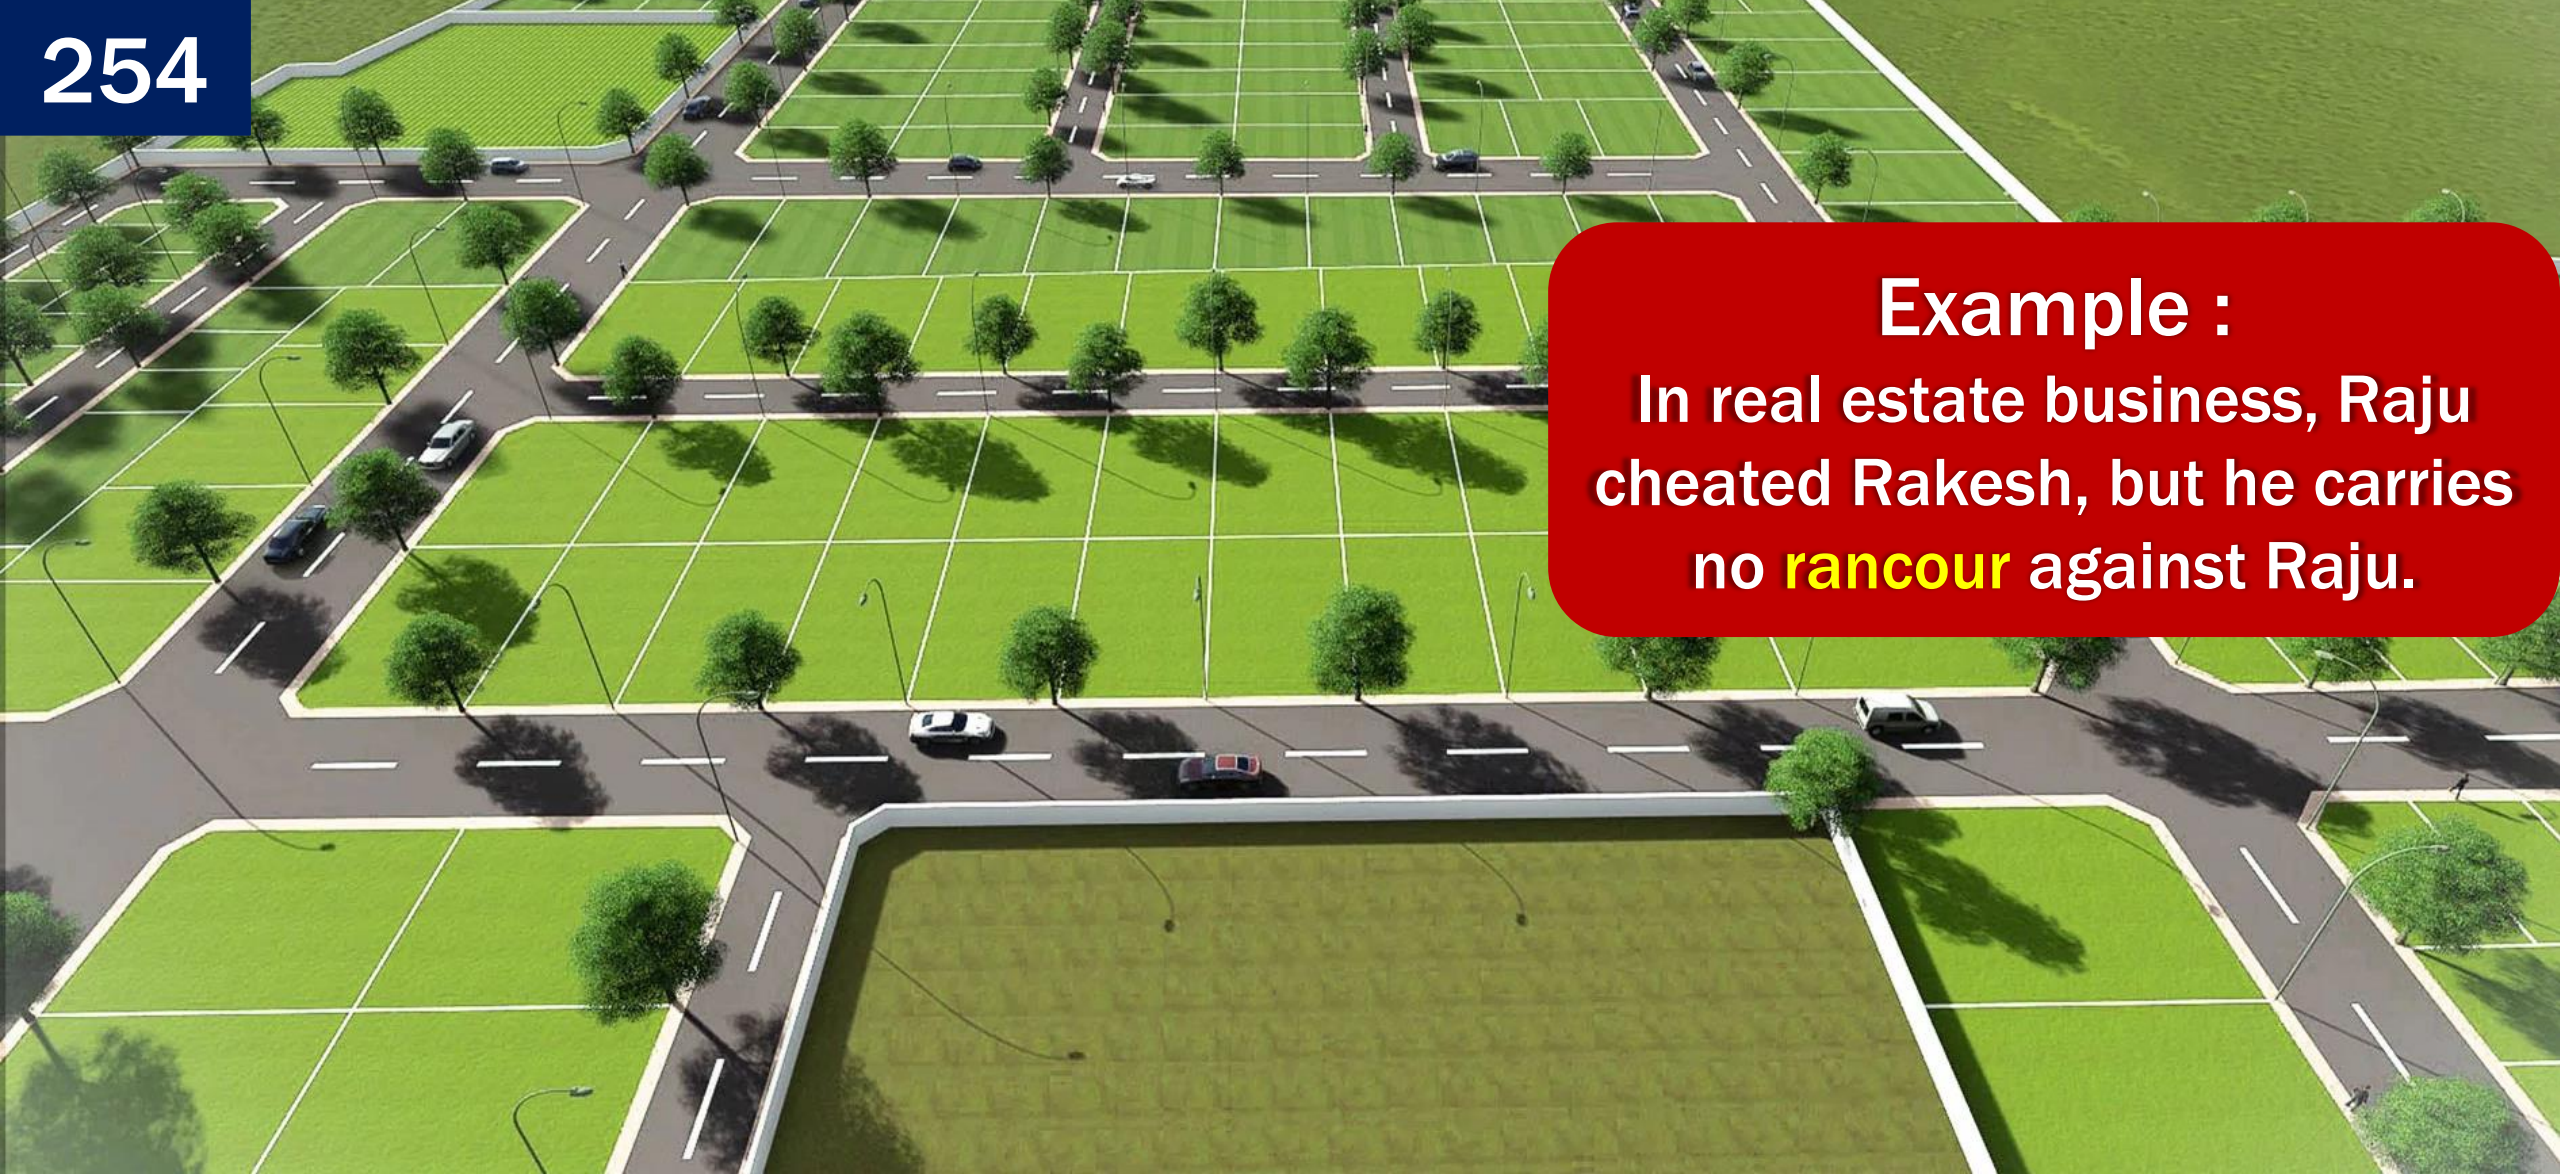

Example :
Constructing houses on the hill slopes is quite perilous.

Rancour : Feeling of hate and a desire to hurt other people because of some incidents in the past.

254

Example :

In real estate business, Raju cheated Rakesh, but he carries no rancour against Raju.

Imprudent : Unwise / failing to consider the likely bad results of your actions.

255

Example :
Indian Public Sector Banks were criticized for being imprudent in their lending to the industrial houses during 2005 to 2012.

Fiscally : In a way, that is connected with money, especially public money.

256

Example :
Governments, while giving out doles, should show fiscal restraint.

Implication : An action or decision that will have an impact on something else in the future.

257

Example :
Some states are reverting to old pension system and that will have long-term implications on the state's finances.

Implication : An occasion when you seem to suggest something, without saying it directly.

257

Example :
XXX accused her own political party and by implication its leader too.

Frayed : Damaged, weakened or worn down by strain or irritation.

258

Example :

After years of hostile and frayed relations, Iran and Saudi Arabia have agreed to reestablish diplomatic ties and reopen mutual embassies.

Adverse : Having a negative or harmful effect on something.

259

Example :

He attracted a lot of adverse publicity with his speech about live-in couples.

Adverse : Having a negative or harmful effect on something.

259

Example :

The weather forecasters are expecting adverse climatic conditions for the next few days.

Adverse : Having a negative or harmful effect on something.

259

Example :

Long term usage of drugs for chronic diseases like blood pressure, diabetes will have adverse effects on other organs.

Consequence : The result of a particular action or situation, often one that is bad or not convenient.

260

Example :

For the old and weak persons, the consequences of a broken hip can be serious.

Consequence : Having a lasting effect / importance.

260

Example :

In Arabian Sea, there were eight cyclones last year, but only one was of any consequence.

Undermine : To make someone less confident / less powerful / weaker, often gradually.

261

Example :
The boss, quite often, resorts to criticism that undermined the confidence of Rakesh.

Undermine : To make someone less confident / less powerful / weaker, often gradually.

261

Example :
When the incompetent Governments continue for long duration, it undermines public confidence on the rulers.

Compromise : Various people involved in a particular issue reduce their demands / change their opinion in order to agree.

262

Example :

In the present circumstances, Israel is not in a position to make compromises and hence the issue of Palestine may linger on for some more years.

03-11-2023

Scapegoating

Pakistan should not blame Afghan refugees for its ills and evils

The Pakistan government's order to all undocumented migrants to leave the country by October 31 has thrown the lives of hundreds of thousands of Afghan refugees in jeopardy. The interim government in Islamabad says its decision is not targeted at any particular nationality. But given the numbers of Afghan refugees in Pakistan, it is evident who is being targeted. Over the decades, millions of Afghans have taken refuge in Pakistan, mostly fleeing violence in their civil war-stricken country. According to the United Nations, about 1.3 million Afghans have been registered as refugees, while another 8,80,000 have legal status to stay. But Pakistan's Interior Ministry says some 1.7 million people are staying "illegally", a vast majority of them Afghans. At least 6,00,000 Afghans are believed to have fled to Pakistan after the Taliban recaptured power in Kabul in 2021. Many others had moved during the Soviet military intervention in the 1980s. Pakistan's order states that they should either leave on their own or face detention and deportation. Pakistan has already set up deportation centres to round up "illegal" migrants and deport them. Thousands are now stranded on the Afghan-Pakistan border, while others are in fear of arrest and violence in Pakistan, leading to the UN's warning of a "humanitarian tragedy".

Pakistan's argument is that the presence of illegal migrants has led to rising crime and terror attacks and is straining its struggling economy. "There have been 24 suicide bomb attacks since January this year and 14 of them were carried out by Afghan nationals," interim Interior Minister Sarfraz Bugti said on October 3, when he announced the deportation plan. Pakistan, which is to have its national elections in January, is also reeling under hyperinflation, a balance of payment crisis and high rupee depreciation. But the solution to these woes is not the forceful deportation of 1.7 million people. The responsibility for most of the problems Pakistan now faces lies with its rulers. When its military and civilian leadership continued to play power games, trying to outwit each other and maximise powers in their hands, its economy was neglected. The security crisis it is facing today is a result of its own dual policy on terror – fighting some outfits while supporting others. When the Taliban, which were backed by Pakistan's military-intelligence establishment, recaptured power in August 2021, it was largely seen then as a victory for Pakistan's generals. But the security crisis Pakistan is facing now suggests that the sense of victory did not last long. Skirmishes along the porous Af-Pak border are also common these days. What Pakistan is doing is scapegoating tens of thousands of poor Afghan refugees for the failures of its own policies.

SCAPEGOATING

Pakistan should not blame Afghan refugees for its ills and evils

The Pakistan government's order to all undocumented migrants to leave the country by October 31 has thrown the lives of hundreds of thousands of Afghan refugees in jeopardy. The interim government in Islamabad says its decision is not targeted at any particular nationality. But given the numbers of Afghan refugees in Pakistan, it is evident who is being targeted. Over the decades, millions of Afghans have taken refuge in Pakistan, mostly fleeing violence in their civil war-stricken country. According to the United Nations, about 1.3 million Afghans have been registered as refugees, while another 8,80,000 have legal status to stay.

03-11-2023

Scapegoating

Pakistan should not blame Afghan refugees for its ills and evils

The Pakistan government's order to all undocumented migrants to leave the country by October 31 has thrown the lives of hundreds of thousands of Afghan refugees in jeopardy. The interim government in Islamabad says its decision is not targeted at any particular nationality. But given the numbers of Afghan refugees in Pakistan, it is evident who is being targeted. Over the decades, millions of Afghans have taken refuge in Pakistan, mostly fleeing violence in their civil war-stricken country. According to the United Nations, about 1.3 million Afghans have been registered as refugees, while another 8,80,000 have legal status to stay. But Pakistan's Interior Ministry says some 1.7 million people are staying "illegally", a vast majority of them Afghans. At least 6,00,000 Afghans are believed to have fled to Pakistan after the Taliban recaptured power in Kabul in 2021. Many others had moved during the Soviet military intervention in the 1980s. Pakistan's order states that they should either leave on their own or face detention and deportation. Pakistan has already set up deportation centres to round up "illegal" migrants and deport them. Thousands are now stranded on the Afghan-Pakistan border, while others are in fear of arrest and violence in Pakistan, leading to the UN's warning of a "humanitarian tragedy".

Pakistan's argument is that the presence of illegal migrants has led to rising crime and terror attacks and is straining its struggling economy. "There have been 24 suicide bomb attacks since January this year and 14 of them were carried out by Afghan nationals," interim Interior Minister Sarfraz Bugti said on October 3, when he announced the deportation plan. Pakistan, which is to have its national elections in January, is also reeling under hyperinflation, a balance of payment crisis and high rupee depreciation. But the solution to these woes is not the forceful deportation of 1.7 million people. The responsibility for most of the problems Pakistan now faces lies with its rulers. When its military and civilian leadership continued to play power games, trying to outwit each other and maximise powers in their hands, its economy was neglected. The security crisis it is facing today is a result of its own dual policy on terror – fighting some outfits while supporting others. When the Taliban, which were backed by Pakistan's military-intelligence establishment, recaptured power in August 2021, it was largely seen then as a victory for Pakistan's generals. But the security crisis Pakistan is facing now suggests that the sense of victory did not last long. Skirmishes along the porous Af-Pak border are also common these days. What Pakistan is doing is scapegoating tens of thousands of poor Afghan refugees for the failures of its own policies.

But Pakistan's Interior Ministry says some 1.7 million people are staying "illegally", a vast majority of them Afghans. At least 6,00,000 Afghans are believed to have fled to Pakistan after the Taliban recaptured power in Kabul in 2021.

Many others had moved during the Soviet military intervention in the 1980s. Pakistan's order states that they should either leave on their own or face detention and deportation. Pakistan has already set up deportation centres to round up "illegal" migrants and deport them.

WE EXPRESS OUR SINCERE THANKS FOR VIEWING THIS VIDEO

Presented by

Learning Space

For Suggestions:

suggestions@learningspace.in

To Contact us:

info@learningspace.in

For Information:

info.learningspacedigital@gmail.com

Visit us at:

www.learningspacedigital.com

98499 42299