MODULE – 27

FOUNDATIONAL VALUES FOR CIVIL SERVICE

Objectivity Vs Subjectivity

OBJECTIVITY	SUBJECTIVITY
- as exists in ground - looking at things as they are - explanation of things as they are, completely devoid of what one thinks of them	- as exists in mind - looking at things as we are - more about what one thinks of things, rather than what things actually are

Why a civil servant needs objectivity?

A civil servant has to make decisions that are beneficial to all. But, if a civil servant starts grasping problems as he/she feels, the solutions he/she proposes do not address the problem and the problem remains unsolved.

OBJECTIVITY

STEREOTYPE

Stereotype means generalization. A person or a situation or a problem is perceived or assessed based on the opinion about the group which that person or situation or problem belongs to.

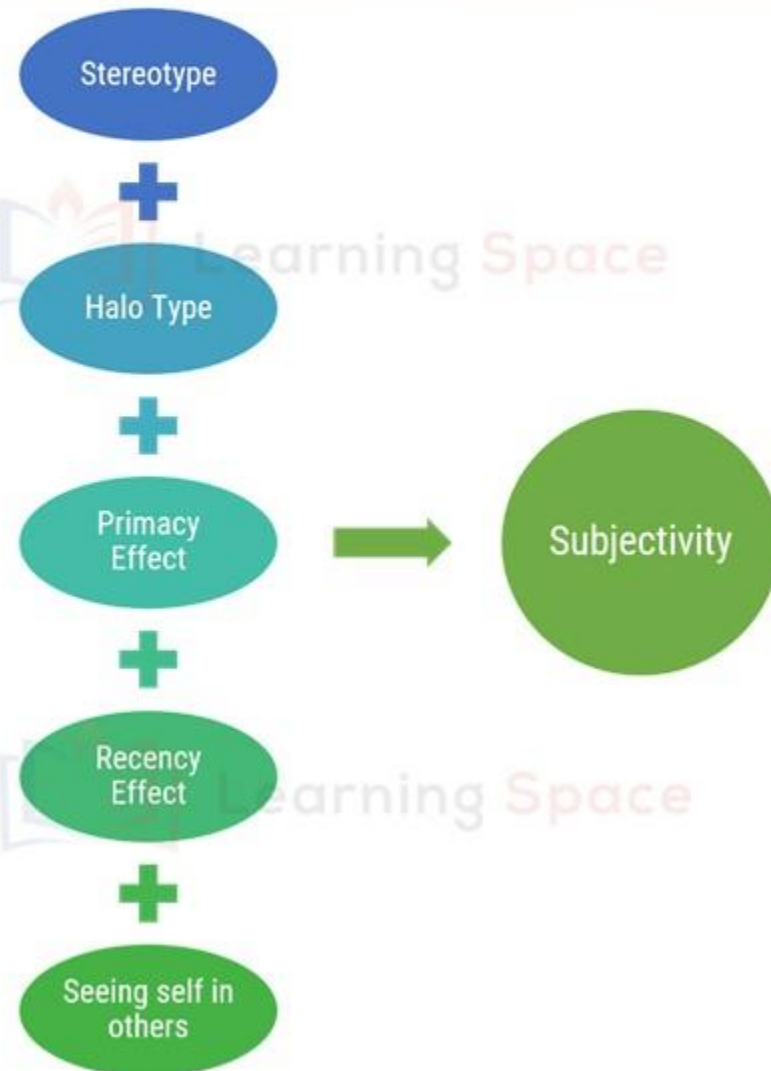

HALO EFFECT

Halo effect implies judging a person by any one trait of him/her. This also takes out objectivity and infuses subjectivity.

PRIMACY EFFECT

Primacy effect implies that first impression determines subsequent impressions about a situation, person or a problem.

Factors influencing objectivity

OBJECTIVITY

REGENCY EFFECT

Under recent effect, the recent impression determines the immediate next impression about a situation, person or a problem. It is akin to hearing a loud noise of cracker blast and suddenly a big steel vessel falls onto floor and you feel it is a cracker blast!

SEEING ONESELF IN OTHERS

As H.M. Tomilson said, "We see things not as they are, but as we are". Subjectivity is also influenced because of one's tendency to put one's self into others. A person may think that he whole world is just as s/he is.

TO DEVELOP OBJECTIVITY

- a Think twice before deciding
- b Don't always believe in intuition
- c Seek others' views
- d Be wary of subjective biases
- e Think both sides of the coin

Impartiality

- Impartiality means not being partial.
- Being partial implies arbitrarily favoring one 'part' at the cost of disfavoring other 'parts'

1 An 'arbitrary better treatment' is regarded as 'favorable treatment', while a 'non-arbitrary better treatment' is regarded as 'differential treatment'.

2 Sometimes favoring one 'part' as against the 'other part' is built into incentive structure. This is the 'part' that performs well is treated better. And, the 'part' that performs badly is treated worse. This is a case of differential treatment, not favorable treatment.

Thus the test of impartiality is 'equal opportunity to all' and 'equals being treated equally'.

A 'part' should be treated better only if every other part was also given the same chance to be treated better. Every 'part' should get equal opportunity to get better treatment.

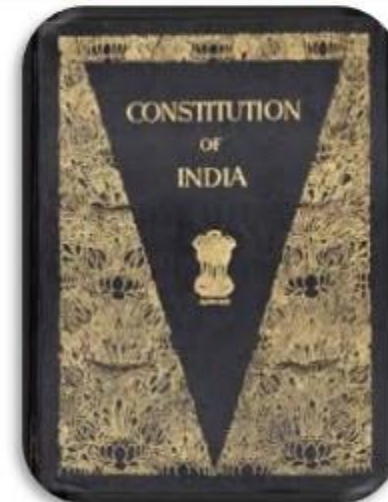

ETHICS, INTEGRITY & APTITUDE

IMPARTIALITY AND NON-PARTISANSHIP

WHY A CIVIL SERVANT NEEDS IMPARTIALITY?

1 Fulfilling all interests equitable: A civil servant is tasked with promoting all legitimate interests of all sections of society. Impartiality ensures the same, but not at the cost of incentivizing good performance.

2 In accordance with Art 14, 15: A civil servant being partial essentially violates the Fundamental Right to Equality of citizens. A civil servant who favors the members of his/her caste in selection of beneficiaries for a government scheme violates Article 15 of constitution.

ETHICS, INTEGRITY & APTITUDE

WHY A CIVIL SERVANT NEEDS IMPARTIALITY?

3

In accordance with professional ethics: Professional ethics implies the expected righteous to be fair and non-partisan. Being partial violates this basic premise of civil service.

4

Majoritarianism prevention: A civil servant is supposed to guard the interests of minorities as much as for the majority. Minority voice is meek mostly because of their insignificant numerical strength. This creates scope for forcing a civil servant to be partial to majority.

ETHICS, INTEGRITY & APTITUDE

WHY A CIVIL SERVANT NEEDS IMPARTIALITY?

5 Promotion of interests of weaker sections:

Weaker sections cannot fight for their share of benefits in any government initiative. A civil servant should not be partial towards stronger sections and should play the advocate for weaker sections.

6 Encouraging work culture:

Work culture refers to the overall attitudes and morale of all employees in totality. Whenever employees feel that there is fair treatment, it boosts their morale. There is incentive to work harder and disincentive to shirk work.

Enablers

Interests' Analysis

No Emotions

Bias-free

Decision Validation

Decision Support Systems

Public Opinion

TO AVOID PARTIALITY

- a Be free from biases
- b Verify decisions with those of peers
- c Impact-on-interest's analysis
- d Apply brakes on emotions
- e Develop objective decision support systems
- f Seek Public Opinion

FREE FROM BIAS

- a A civil servant should consciously be free from such biases as stereotypes, halo effect, recency effect, primacy effect, association of things.

VERIFY WITH PEERS

- b Analyzing the proposed decision in light of the same or similar decisions taken by peers could help one check for the component of partiality in one's own decision.

OBJECTIVE DECISION SUPPORT SYSTEM

- e Partiality emerges mostly from discretion. If the element of discretion is eliminated, then partiality vanishes. Such decision support systems based on objective criteria should be built.

SEEKING PUBLIC OPINION

- f Unless the decision is confidential, put all possible draft-decisions on public domain. Then the comments for each of the decision from every interest group are received. In the light of the above, a decision that does not arbitrarily favour any particular section can be taken.

IMPACT ON INTEREST

- c Compare the impact of a decision on all the stakeholders. This would help one analyze if interest of any one group is unreasonably or arbitrarily favored.

BRAKES ON EMOTIONS

- d Most arbitrary partial decision are made under the influence of emotions. If emotions are avoided and decisions are made on the basis of rationality, partiality can be avoided

Service

- Service refers to intangible product that meets a specific need of a consumer.
- Public Service refers to delivery of service to the public at large by government. It is provided either by the Government on its own or through any other agencies.

Examples

Public services include police service, judicial service, Provision of electricity, water, sewerage, roads public transportation, public health etc.,

Dedication to public service implies complete involvement of oneself in the delivery of public service. Public service should not be treated as just another job, because public service delivery directly impacts every member in the society.

Why Dedication to Public Service?

Any disruption in public service delivery could scuttle the societal development or could lead to lop-sided development.

A DEDICATED PUBLIC SERVANT WOULD

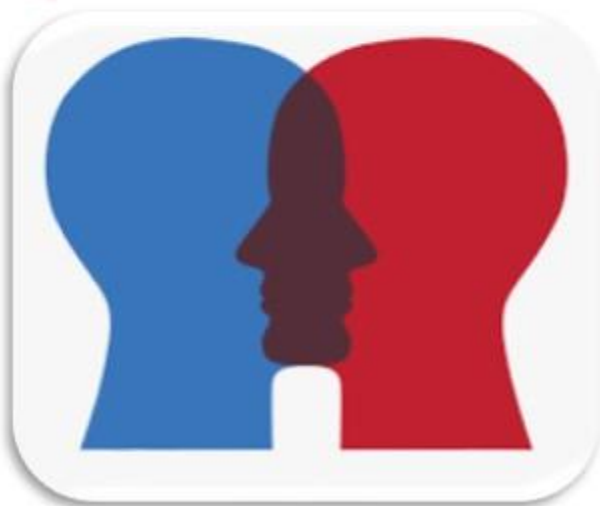

- place public service over and above family and other personal affairs.
- keep his/her hobbies and interests aside in order to perform public service
- abstain from setting up of private and parallel professions that affect public service delivery.

EMPATHY

EMPATHY

- placing oneself in the shoes of others. In other words, it essentially means thinking from the standpoint of another person.
- attempting to experience the experiences of others.

Why Empathy?

A civil servant's actions and decisions are likely to affect large masses. Hence, small amount of empathy could help him/her experience the feelings and troubles of others, so that appropriate decisions are made.

EMPATHY

TALK

- a To empathize, firstly, one should have knowledge about the feelings of others. This comes from talking to people. Hence, a civil servant needs to constantly talk to people to find out their emotions and feelings.

VISUALIZE

- b A person can visualize pain, pleasure and plight of others. This visualization could create a sense of empathy in the one who visualizes. To illustrate, a person can just close his eyes and visualize a war scene and hear the sound of bullets and firing all around him.

TO DEVELOP EMPATHY

- a Talk to people
- b Visualize others' plight
- c Read fiction and non-fiction
- d Develop tolerance

EMPATHY

READ

- c • Literary forms like novels, movies, stories and folklore are nothing but the portrayal of emotions of individuals.
- Biographies and Autobiographies provide a peep into the lives of other people, and their emotions.

TOLERANCE

- d • Tolerance refers to respecting and accommodating the attitudes and practices of others.
- This is more so with regard to the attitudes and practices that are diametrically opposite to one's own.

TO DEVELOP EMPATHY

- a Talk to people
- b Visualize others' plight
- c Read fiction and non-fiction
- d Develop tolerance

TOLERANCE

Why a civil servant needs Tolerance?

One's own beliefs may not be always correct. Hence, tolerance would help in correcting one's belief or rationalizing the same.

Tolerance promotes diversity. Otherwise, monotony sets into the functioning of society. This is a dangerous sign for decay of the society.

Syntheses of two sets of ideas creates a better idea and better ways of life.

Most law and order problems arise because two groups hate the belief systems of each other. Every group seeks to establish supremacy over the other. This is because of the attitude of intolerance to another competing group.

COMPASSION

- sympathetic pity and concern for the sufferings or misfortunes of others.

WEAKER SECTIONS

- poor, beggars, destitute, orphans, deserted senior citizens, SCs, STs, persons with disability, transgender and women.

Rich, educated and influential citizens have the means to meet their needs and interests. But, weaker sections do not have voice. Hence, a civil servant has to stand by their interests. The motivation to stand by weaker sections springs from compassion towards weaker sections.

COMPASSION TOWARDS WEAKER SECTIONS

WHY COMPASSION?

1 Weaker individuals are not even allowed inside government offices. The employees are either not guided or misguided. It is imperative for a civil servant to be compassionate and pass on instructions to subordinates.

2 A civil servant needs to understand that weaker sections come all the way from faraway places to meet. Hence, he/she need to make all possible efforts to meet all the petitioners.

3 The departments meant for the welfare of weaker sections are often poorly staffed. Here, a civil servant's compassion prods him/her to provide adequate resources for such departments to deliver the benefits of scheme.

4 Weaker sections are often socially ostracized and subjected to inhuman practices in villages. This is more so in case of scheduled castes. Such harassments have to be dealt with iron hand.
