- 3 But in the later part of his reign he saw serious challenges. Jats, Sikhs and Satnamis revolted against his religious policy.

INTRODUCTION

4 Aurangzeb's Reign can be divided into 2 Phases:

- First Phase – Initial 25 years – Aurangzeb focussed on the North-West frontier during this period and in this time Shivaji carved out a kingdom for himself in the territories of north and south Konkan.

NORTH EASTERN CONQUEST

- 1 Aurangzeb wanted to expand Mughal power in Assam in the north-east region.
- 2 In 1662 AD, Mir Jumla, Aurangzeb's ablest general and the governor of Bengal, led the expedition against the Ahoms.
- 3 Mughals suffered heavy losses and Jumla died in 1663 AD on his way back to Dacca. But they were able to strike a favourable treaty

4 However, the Ahom kingdom could not be controlled for long and the Mughal faujdars had to face resistance and regular conflicts. Thus, by 1680 AD, the Ahoms succeeded in capturing Kamrupa and Mughal control over the territory ended

5 Another notable achievement in north-east was capture of island of Sondip and Chittagong in 1664 AD under Shaista Khan, the Governor of Bengal.

CONQUEST OF DECCAN

PERIOD BETWEEN 1658 TO 1668 AD

The First phase (1658-1668) was characterized by the policies of Raja Jai Singh, the Governor of Deccan, who advocated a forward policy. This phase saw the defeat of Shivaji at the hand of Jai Singh and the signing of the treaty of Purandhar.

- 1 The main attempt of Aurangzeb during this period was to recover from Bijapur the territories belonging to the Ahmadnagar state.

CONQUEST OF DECCAN

PERIOD BETWEEN 1668 TO 1684 AD

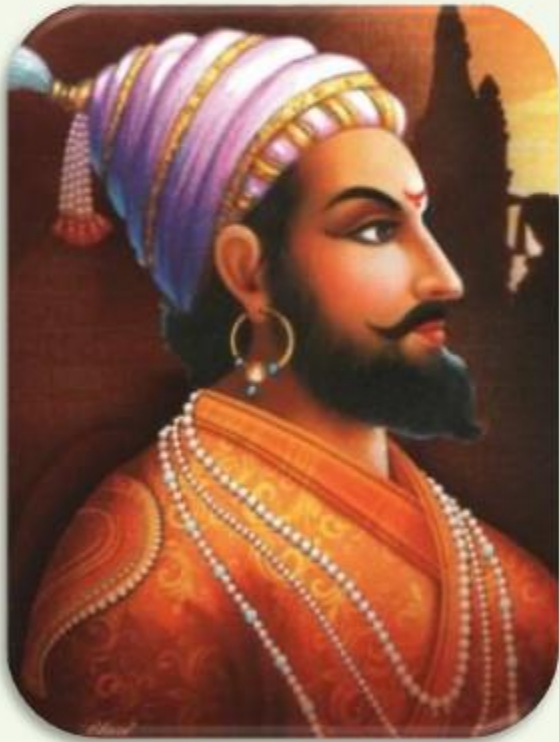

- 1 During this phase, attempts were made to secure the help of the Deccan states against Marathas who were rising into a major threat to Mughals
- 2 The Marathas were considered as the major danger in the Deccan and efforts were made to pressurise Bijapur and Golconda into joining hands with the Mughals against Shivaji and then against his son Sambhaji.
- 3 Thus, this shift in Mughal policy was due to:
 - the death of Adil Shah of Bijapur
 - the growing power of Shivaji
 - the increasing influence of the brothers Akhanna and Madanna in Golconda administration

CONQUEST OF DECCAN

PERIOD BETWEEN 1668 TO 1684 AD

- 4 But Aurangzeb's efforts to contain the Marathas were not very successful as the tripartite alliance between Golconda, Shivaji, and Bijapur did not allow Aurangzeb to have his way.
- 5 In 1679–1680 AD, desperate effort by Mughal viceroy Diler Khan to capture Bijapur failed due to this tripartite alliance.

- 3 Aurangzeb made Khirki, founded by Malik Ambar, the capital of Mughal Deccan and named it Aurangabad.

CONQUEST OF DECCAN

PERIOD BETWEEN 1687 TO 1707 AD

- 1 Aurangzeb spent most of his time in Deccan in this period.
- 2 There were continuous conflicts with Marathas, but he still managed to keep the region under Mughal control.
- 3 It was during this period that Sambhaji (Shivaji's son) was captured and executed
- 4 But after his death in 1707 AD (at Aurangabad in Deccan), the Marathas reasserted their independence and succeeded within a short span of time.

CONQUEST OF DECCAN

PERIOD BETWEEN 1687 TO 1707 AD

NOTE:

- The destruction of the Deccan kingdoms was a political blunder on the part of Aurangzeb as with the fall of the Deccan Sultanate, the barrier between the Mughals and the Marathas was removed and there ensued a direct confrontation between them.
- His Deccan campaigns exhausted the Mughal treasury.
