ESTABLISHMENT OF BRITISH EIC

CONQUEST OF MYSORE

WHY BRITISH WANT TO CONQUER MYSORE?

French factor:-

- Mysore's proximity with the French which might affect their political and commercial interests in south India.

Commercial interest:-

- Mysore's control over the rich trade of the Malabar coast.
- This coast also provided access to the Indian Ocean.

THEORY

HISTORY OF MYSORE

- 1 Due to decline of great kingdom Vijayanagara empire, many small dynasties rose.
- 2 In 1612 a Hindu kingdom under the Wodeyars emerged in the region of Mysore
- 3 From 1734 to 1766, Mysore was under Krishnaraja Wodeyar II.
- 4 But there was repeated incursions of the Marathas and Nizam of Hyderabad.
- 5 Thus, Mysore became financially and politically weak
- 6 When Krishnaraja died, Haidar Ali who was sepoy in Mysore army, usurped the royal authority by becoming de facto ruler of Mysore in 1761.
- 7 During second half of the 18th century, Mysore emerged as formidable power under the leadership of Haidar Ali and Tipu Sultan

Tipu failed mainly because he has to fight three armies

RESULT OF THE WAR

1

Treaty of Seringapatam, 1792

2

This battle drained the resources and made it very difficult for the kingdom
to recover to the original state.

Tipu could only save his kingdom from total extinction by preparation and planning which seemed to be beyond his resources.

FOURTH ANGLO MYSORE WAR (1798-99)

BACKGROUND

TIPU'S ACTION

In 1796, When the hindu ruler of Wodeyar dynasty died, Tipu refused to place Wodeyar's minor son on the throne and declared himself sultan.

Tipu also decided to avenge his humiliating defeat and the terms put by the Treaty of Seringapatam.

In 1796 Tipu made an effort to modernize navy and planned for 22 battleships and 20 frigates.

WELLESLEY'S CONCERN

About Tipu's friendship with the French and aimed at annihilating Tipu's independent existence or force him to sign Subsidiary Alliance.

Charges against Tipu –

- Intriguing with nizam and marathas
- Sending emissaries to Arabia, Afghanistan, Constantinople, French(Mauritius)

MYSORE AFTER TIPU

Territory of Tipu was distributed among the players.

Mysore state was handed over to Wodeyar dynasty which was ruling earlier and minor ruler Krishnaraja III was put to throne, who accepted the subsidiary alliance.

In 1881 Lord Ripon restored the kingdom to its ruler.

In 1831 William Bentinck took control of Mysore on grounds of misgovernance.

THEORY

CONQUEST OF MYSORE

FIRST ANGLO MYSORE WAR (1767-69)

- 1 English concluded a treaty with Nizam of Hyderabad persuading him to give them Northern Circars in return assured to protect Nizam from Haider Ali.
- 2 The Nizam, the Marathas, and the English allied together against Haider Ali.
- 3 Haider Ali paid Marathas to turn them neutral and, promised Nizam to share conquered territories. He then joined the Nizam to attack the Nawab of Arcot.
- 4 The war continued for a year-and-a-half without any conclusion.
- 5 Haider suddenly turned the tables on the English and attacked Madras.
- 6 There was complete chaos and panic at Madras forcing the English to conclude a very humiliating treaty with Haider on April 4, 1769—Treaty of Madras.
- 7 The treaty provided for the exchange of prisoners and mutual restitution of conquests. Haider Ali was promised the help of the English in case he was attacked by any other power.

THEORY

CONQUEST OF MYSORE

SECOND ANGLO MYSORE WAR (1780-84)

- 1 Haidar Ali accused the English of breach of faith and non-observance of the Treaty of Madras.
- 2 French were much more helpful than English in meeting his army's requirement
- 3 Through Mahe, a French possession on the Malabar coast, some French war material was brought to Mysore
- 4 Haidar considered the English attempt to capture Mahe a direct challenge to his authority.
- 5 Haidar forged an anti-English alliance with the Marathas and the Nizam.
- 6 English under Sir Eyre Coote, he detached this alliance by presenting Maratha's & Nizam army to reach him.
- 7 Haider suffered defeat at porto novo and later died of cancer. Now his son, Tipu Sultan, carried on the war for one year without any positive outcome. Fed up with an inconclusive war, both sides opted for peace, negotiating the Treaty of Mangalore (March, 1784) under which each party gave back the territories it had taken from the other.

THEORY

CONQUEST OF MYSORE

THIRD ANGLO MYSORE WAR (1789-92)

- 1 Dispute arose between Tipu and the state of Travancore. Travancore had purchased Cannanore from Dutch in Cochin state.
- 2 As Cochin was a feudatory of Tipu, he considered the act of Travancore as a violation of his sovereign rights.
- 3 The English, siding with Travancore, attacked Tipu.
- 4 With the support of the Marathas and the Nizam, the English attacked Seringapatam.
- 5 Tipu offered serious opposition, but he had to pay heavily under the Treaty of Seringapatam.
- 6 Under this treaty of 1792, nearly half of the Mysore territory was taken over by the English, Marathas and Nizam.
- 7 War damage of three crore rupees was also taken from Tipu. Half of the war indemnity was to be paid immediately while the rest was to be given in installments, for which Tipu's two sons were taken as hostages by the English.

THEORY

CONQUEST OF MYSORE

FOURTH ANGLO MYSORE WAR (1798-99)

- 1 Tipu fulfilled all the terms of the Treaty of Seringapatam and got his sons released
- 2 In 1796, when Hindu ruler of Wodeyar dynasty died, Tipu refused to place Wodeyar's minor son on the throne and declared himself sultan.
- 3 Lord Wellesley was concerned about Tipu's friendship with the French and aimed at annihilating Tipu's independent existence or force him to sign Subsidiary Alliance.
- 4 War began on April 17, 1799 and ended on May 4, 1799 with fall of Seringapatam.
- 5 English were again helped by the Marathas and the Nizam.
- 6 Tipu laid down his life fighting bravely. Later English chose a boy from the earlier Hindu royal family of Mysore as the maharaja and also imposed on him the subsidiary alliance system.

SUMMARY OF FOUR ANGLO-MYSORE WAR
