WHAT MADE DUTCH TO LOOK TOWARDS EAST ASIA?

FIGHT FOR SOVEREIGNTY

POLITICAL

Dutch were fighting for their independence from Spain and were keen to take revenge on Catholic Spain.

DUTCH

COMMERCIAL

Involve in eastern produce which they bought from Portugal and sold in northern Europe. It which was the main source of revenue for war with Spain.

But when Spain and Portugal merged to maximize their trade. This disturb the trade relation between Dutch and Portugal and affected Dutch economy

These event forced Dutch to look for alternative option to trade with east.

HOW DUTCH WERE ABLE TO CARVE A NICHE?

Eighty Years' War, between Spain and Dutch finally led to the formation of the United Provinces of the Netherlands (the Dutch Republic).

- Huyghen van Linschoten, a Dutch merchant copied top secret Portuguese nautical maps.
- Dutch attacked at Portuguese slave trading stations at west Africa.
- Conflict with Portuguese settled with support of English by which Dutch dominated over Portuguese.

INDEPENDENT FROM SPAIN.

Amboyna tragedy-

- Dutch after conquering Portuguese fortress at amboyna, tried to obtain monopsony in the spice trade of the region which irked British.
- When Dutch found British spying near their factory, Dutch attacked British and brutally massacred British servants.
- The result of tragedy was British exit from archipelago and focus on India and Dutch ruled without any rival.

SUBSIDIARY INTEREST IN INDIA

WHAT MADE THEM TO LOOK TOWARDS INDIA?

INDIA

- This exchange of cotton goods were mainly done from Gujarat and Coromandal coast.
- Coromandal cloth trade was given more importance than Malabar pepper trade as it was less valuable.

INDONESIA

- First permanent trading post of Dutch East India Company was in Indonesia.
- Their main interest lies in Indonesian islands of Java, Sumatra (Spice islands) not in India, but continue trade activities.

COTTON GOODS

spices of archipelago were exchanged for cotton goods

SPICES

Hence, it can be noted that DUTCH had distinctly subsidiary interest in India and promoted Indian textile in world market.

REASON FOR DECLINE

SIGNIFICANCE

REASONS FOR DECLINE OF THE EMPIRE

1 RISE OF ENGLISH AND FRENCH POWERS – main reason.

2 ADMINISTRATIVE REASONS:

- Corruption and Bankruptcy
- Too much Dutch Government interference
- Like Portuguese they treated people cruelly and exploited them ruthlessly.

4 Two battles proved disastrous

- Battle of Colachel
- Battle of Chinsura (Battle of Bidara)

3 COMMERCIAL REASONS:

- Prominence to Indonesia instead of India because Indonesian trade was more profitable and lucrative.
- Short-sighted commercial policy– centred around monopoly of spice trade.

BATTLE OF COLACHEL, 1741

Fought between

STATE OF TRAVANCORE

DUTCH EAST INDIA COMPANY

REASONS

- Almost all the pepper that the Dutch imported into their country came from the kingdom of Odanad in Kerala.
- Marthanda Varma king of Travancore wanted to conquer Kingdom of Odanad, as its king plot some conspiracies against Marthanada varma.
- But Dutch were wary about the expansionary policy of Travancore as it will affect their pepper trade.
- Initially they wrote to king of Travancore but this cold war converted into full fledged war.

OUTCOME

- Dutch EIC was defeated and this was great blow to their Pepper trade.
- It shattered their dream of the conquest of Kerala.
- This was the humiliating defeat for Dutch on Indian soil.

BATTLE OF CHINSURA (BEDARA) , 1759

Fought between

BRITISH EIC

DUTCH EIC (VOC)

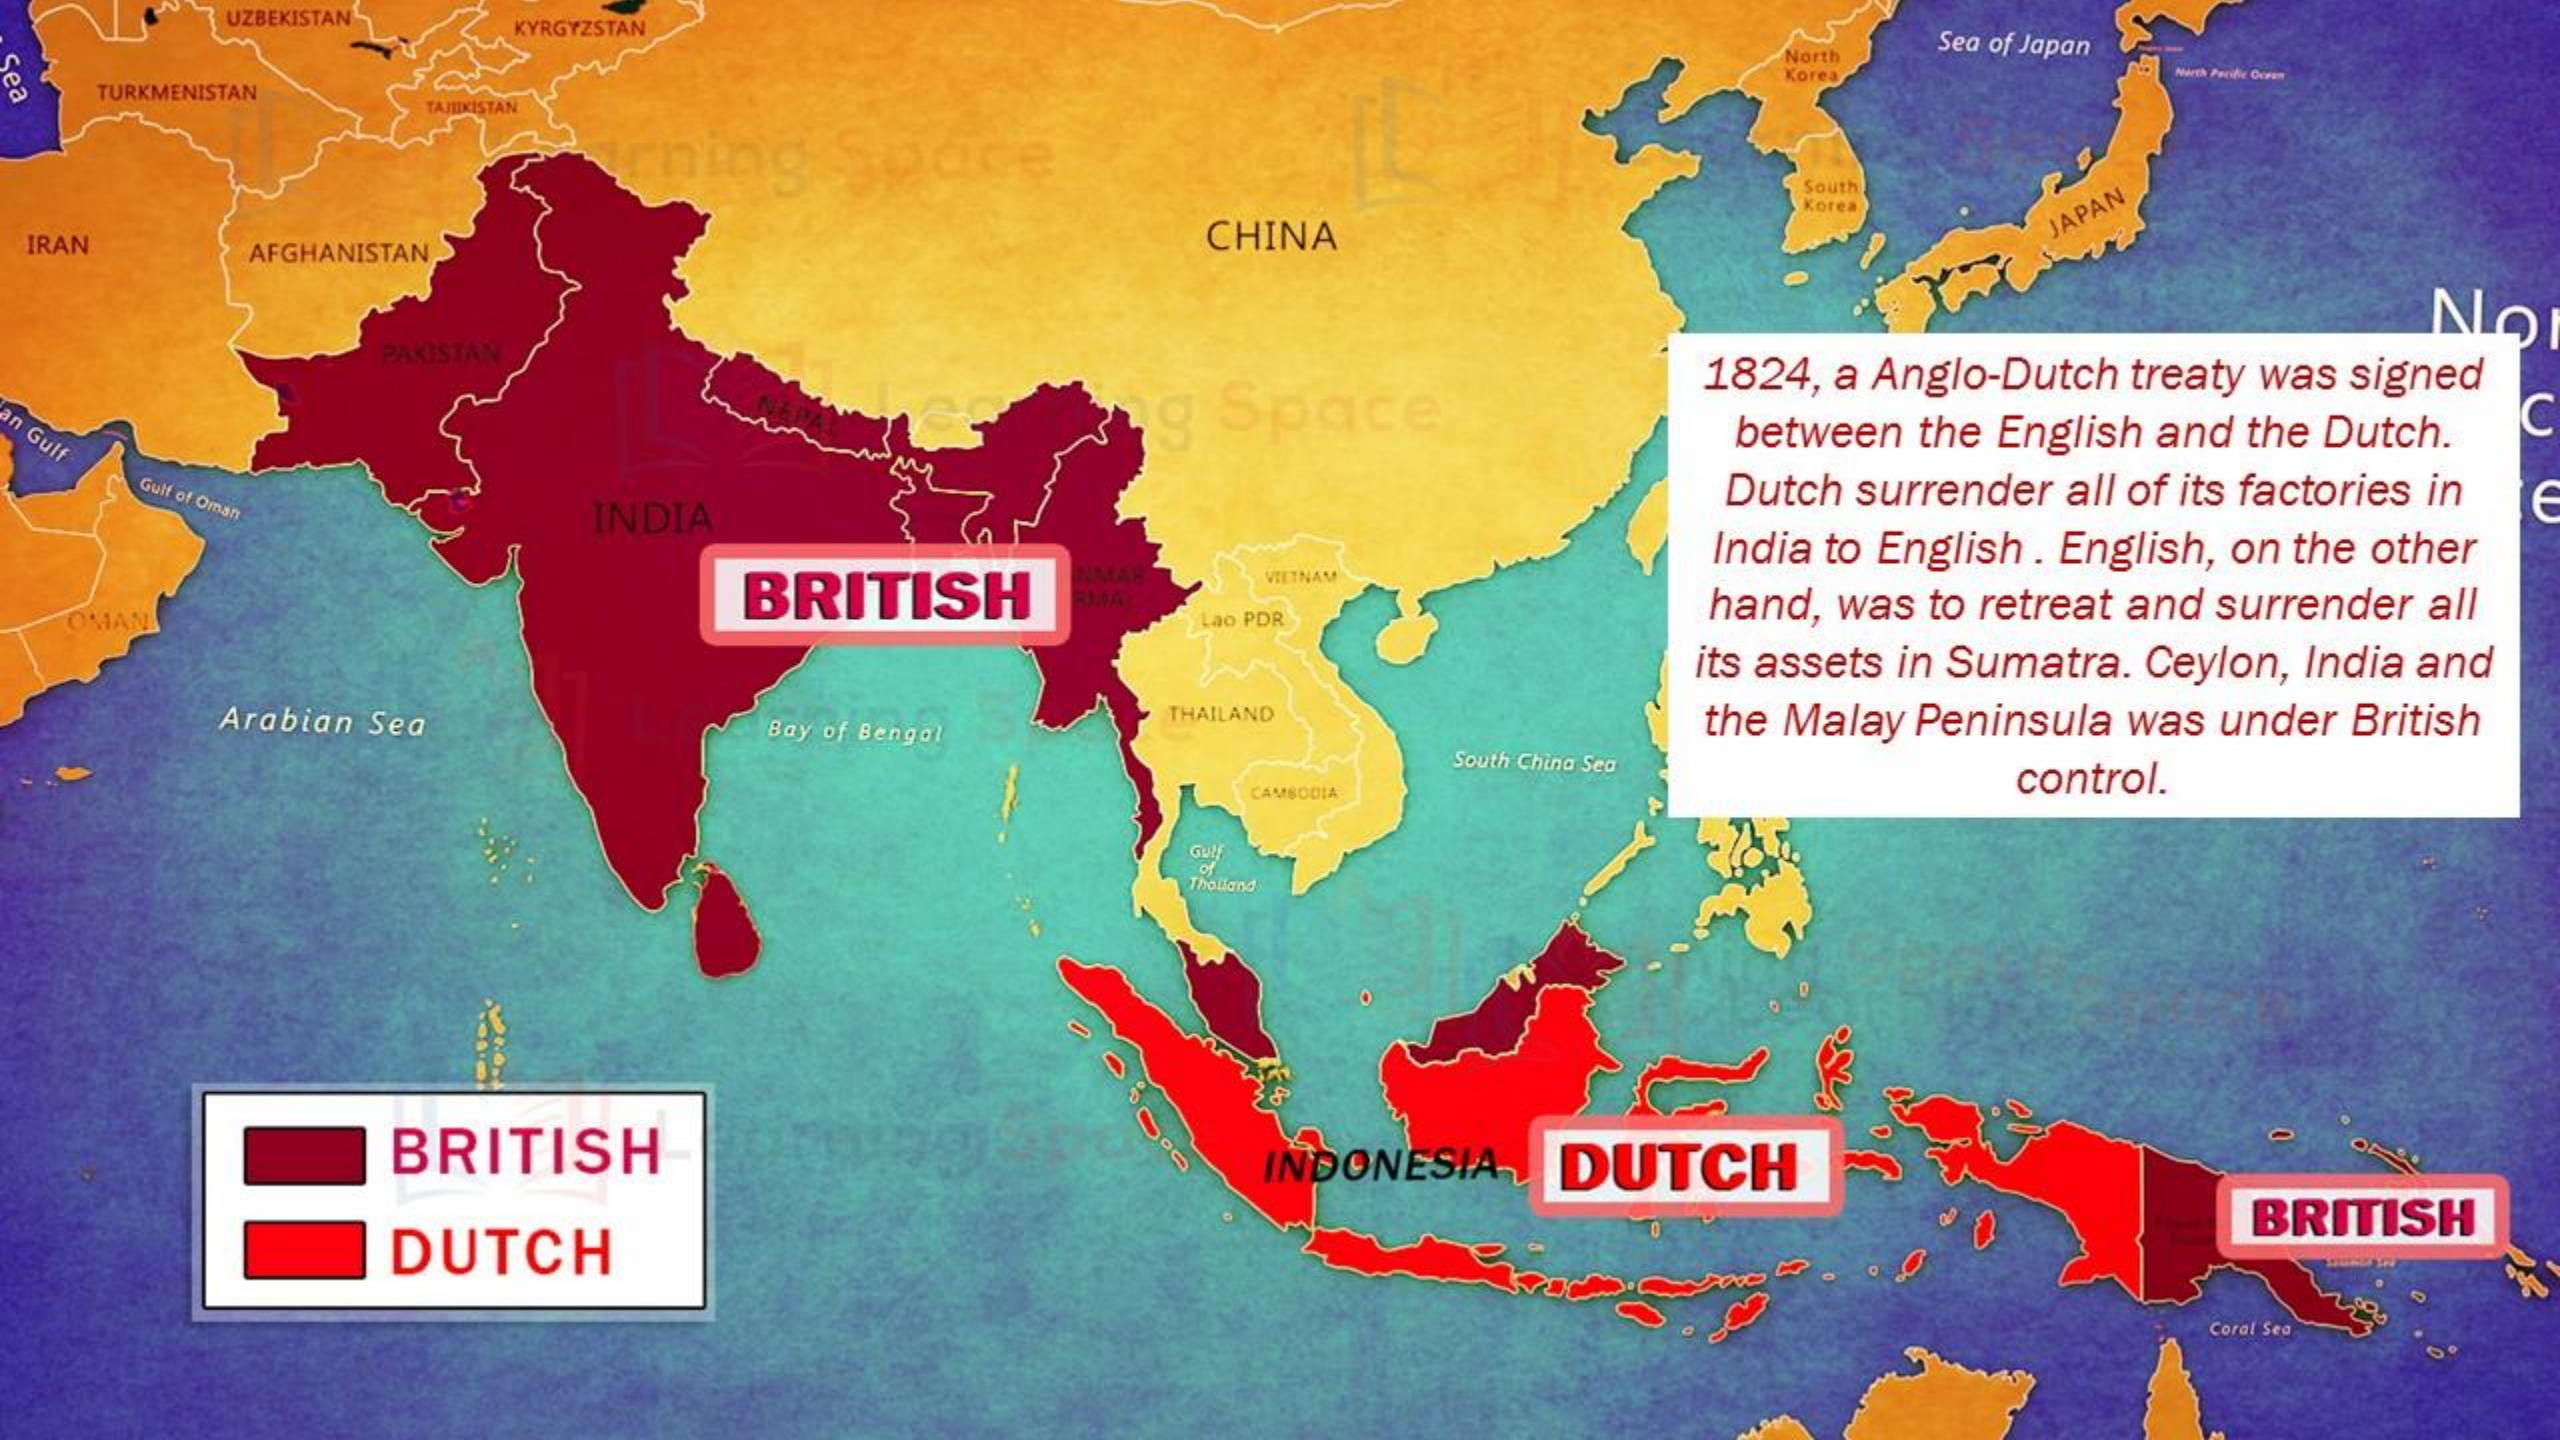

REASONS

- Nawab of Bengal Mir Jafar, wanted to come out from the clutches of English so he approached Dutch for help.
- This alliance irked British EIC.
- They attacked them both by land and water at Chinsura on the Hugli River, near Kolkata.

OUTCOME

- Dutch EIC was defeated and finally their vision of establishing their empire in India was shattered forever.
- Ultimately Dutch EIC colonial power ended and was merely reduced to a trading company.
- In Bengal, Mir Jafar was replaced by Mir Qasim.

1824, a Anglo-Dutch treaty was signed between the English and the Dutch. Dutch surrender all of its factories in India to English . English, on the other hand, was to retreat and surrender all its assets in Sumatra. Ceylon, India and the Malay Peninsula was under British control.
